Le Quartier de l'Horloge connects Les Halles with Le Marais. Seen here on Beaubourg street with the famous Centre Pompidou.

From the birth of the Quartier de l'Horloge district as its current management: All information are for its inhabitants and a platform for exchange for its co-owners.

This blog aims to overcome stereotypes, to disseminate information and to bring together the inhabitants to improve the quality of life and master condominium levy charges.

Within four years it has become the reference for the management of the Quartier de l'Horloge district. With visitors non only from France but from Italy, USA and South Africa, this blog is read daily right trough the world by an handful of inquisitive people. Every year more than 20 000 pages are viewed and hundreds of downloads. Co-owner residents, expatriates and foreign owners find here the district life.

This blog unveils the secrets of its organization and gives idea on how to improve the management of this district of two hectares. It also address prospective subjects, such as the proposed closing during the night, greening of public areas, the necessary balance between residents and traders.

Modern condominium in the heart of Paris.

Our purpose is to give confidence to his inhabitants.

Part of this blog is directed in priority to the members of the ASLQH, that is to say to the residential, shops and parking owners. The free union association of the Quartier de l'Horloge (ASLQH) is a private organization managing 16 condominiums: 10 residential buildings, 1 office building, a set of low rent housing and 3 commercial condominiums, cinemas, restaurants and parking called SOCOPAR.

L'ASLQH consists of more than 2000 members, however, the Property Manager of the association, in place for the last 35 years, works in a totally disconnected way of working interests of his constituents, the co-owners.

This is the starting point of this blog.

We would like to contribute to:

- Gather, share and disseminate information
- Share our archive data
- Inform the co-owners of their rights
- Train future union advisor of condominiums
- Supervise trustees in condominium management tasks
- Participate in the governance reform of the l'ASLQH by enforcing by-laws of the association
- Improve the management
- Give a voice to each
- Lowering the condominium levy charges
